Seventeenth District Loses One; Gains One In Redistricting Plan

According to a redistricting plan announced for the House of Delegates area counties will be completely regrouped. In the statewide shuffle, eight seats are being transferred to the large urban areas at the expense of the agricultural and less populated districts, which include Southside Virginia. The Upper Valley area, and Southwest Virginia.

Big winners in the House redistricting plan are Northern Virginia, with five more seats, Norfolk, Portsmouth, and Hampton with a gain of one each

Cumberland Shifted

Under the proposed plan, Cumberland County will be switched. Cumberland will join Prince Edward and Charlotte counties to give this new district a population of 33,849. Cumberland is currently in the 17th district with Appomattox and Buckingham counties.

Under the proposed plan Appomattox and Buckingham will be divorced from Cumberland but will pick up the more populous county of Nelson to give this new district a total population figure of 32,777. The present 17th district is represented by D. William A. Pennington of Buckingham county. Amherst is currently represented by James W. Davis, of Amherst County.

Court Order

The redistricting plan is being done under orders of the U. S. Supreme Court, which has directed that valid redistricting be accomplished by Dec. 15.

The General Assembly actually redistricted itself in 1962, but this was attacked successfully in the federal court, which ordered the districts to be as nearly equal as possible in population. The ideal population figure per district is 40,000. The proposed plan generally seeks to keep the average population per delegate between 32,000 and 48,000 which would mean no deviation greater than 20 per cent from the ideal norm of 40,000.

Banker Emphasizes Business-type Operation of Southside E

J. R. Ashwell, of Hnddleston E. D. English, of Bedford

Directors of Southside Electric Cooperative in Cr Operate Organization Efficiently, Bedford Banker

The selection of good businessmen as directors and the continuous effort on the part of these men to "keep up with the times" are major factors in the healthy financial condition of the Southside Electric Cooperative, and its high standing with the people of rural Virginia.

This was the appraisal given by E. D. English, of Bedford, the senior Vice-President of the First National Exchange Bank of Virginia (Roanoke) in a discussion of the Cooperative's operation with J. R. Ashwell, of Huddleston, the Director on the Board from Bedford County.

"Mr. Ashwell is in the automobile business here in Bedford County at Huddleston," Mr. English said, "and he operates a very nice and successful Chevrolet agency. He has made a success of this business because he is a business man," Mr. English continued.

"So it was no surprise to me when the members of the Southside Electric Cooperative tapped him to be on this 10-man Board, the group that directs the multi-million dollar cooperative electric distribution system which serves so many rural farms and businesses here in Virginia.

Needs Businessman

"For a business to be successful, we say in banking circles, it must be run by a businessman. And this is exactly what qualifies these Directors of the Southside Electric Cooperative's Board—at least those on it I know, and Mr. Ashwell is one of my valued customers and friends.

'Southside Electric Cooperative has contributed to the rapid growth of this section under the fine leadership of Mr. Ashwell and his co-workers. This organization has been a contributing factor to the making of profits by rural folks," he said. "Electricity for their home and farm use has often been the difference between loss and profit.

"Then another thing is important," Mr. English continued, as he and Mr. Ashwell talked about the problems of the Cooperative and the future needs of the people of Bedford and other Virginia counties who are members of Southside Electric Cooperative.

"The very fact that you are here talking with me, asking me my opinion of the Cooperative, and what I think will help improve your operation, strikes me as the other salient point in making your organization a success.

On The Alert

"You are always on the alert for opinions, solution to problems, guidance for future needs —the elements that are the backbone of a successful business. You apparently do not wait for these problems to present themselves. You seem to try to find out what is happening and prepare to take care of the problem if and when it ever appears.

"To me, this is just good business management," Mr. English concluded. "I hope your organization will always continue to have good, solid and honest businessmen a... If you do, you will ... a successful operat... vide the service t... members to wish ... titled."

But seniority of the kind Senator Moses had, and of his immediate successors, will not for long be among those who are, broadly speaking, of his generation, or with his rural background, or his conservatism."

Christian's grandsons, Stanley Henry and Mitchell Henry, plus a friend, Richard Lee Megginson, were in on the celebration, and presumably getting set for a good meal of venison to mark Thanksgiving and the beginning of the holiday season.
